Application Instructions (October 2027)

The following instructions are for those applying for enrollment to the School of Interdisciplinary Science and Innovation (ISI) starting in October 2027.

1. October 2027 Intake

Only a limited number of students will be admitted to the School.

2. Admission Policy

A. Ideal Candidate Profile

To achieve the ideals and objectives in its Education Charter, Kyushu University seeks students who will grow into active learners with the desire to learn for themselves and the ability to go further in posing their own questions, scrutinizing and considering the issues creatively and critically, and working with others to solve problems based on a broad outlook. This growth will be stimulated by the comprehensive liberal arts education and specialist primary education provided at the university, building upon the general education in basic disciplines and subjects provided at high school and similar educational institutions.

The School of Interdisciplinary Science and Innovation welcomes students with the following qualities, abilities, and attitudes.

- Initiative and attitude for active learning: Spontaneously seeking and acquiring various knowledge and skills necessary for considering issues and finding solutions for them in the future.
- Strong will for collaboration: Willingly collaborating with people from different backgrounds and perspectives and working together for searching ways to solve issues.
- Critical thinking: Considering and reviewing not only existing academic knowledge and findings but also your thought and ideas critically, correcting errors and mistakes, and improving knowledge, findings, and ideas.
- International Perspectives: Eagerly collaborating with people worldwide to improve our future and continuously improving language skills to achieve this end.

B. The Relation between the Ideal Candidate and the Three Academic Abilities

- (1) Knowledge and skills: Knowledge and skills acquired through education at high school and similar educational institutions. In addition, a strong interest in global and local events, a powerful desire to engage in international activities, and a passion for acquiring the language skills necessary for these activities.
- (2) Thinking, Judgment, and Expression: Thinking and judging critically with broad perspectives, expressing your ideas by yourself, constantly reflecting on yourself, admitting mistakes and errors, and willingly learning lessons from mistakes and errors.

- (3) Active Attitudes for collaborating with and learning from others: Respecting diversity and different ideas, willingly learning from others, and collaborating with people with diverse backgrounds for future solutions to issues we now face.

C. Entrance Examinations

The entrance examinations for ISI are designed to identify candidates' abilities and skills rather than specific subject knowledge with the following four strategies.

1. Four Different Types of Examinations

To select ideal candidates, ISI implements four different types of Entrance Examinations: Comprehensive Admission; Recommendation-Based Admission; General Admission; and International Admission. ISI evaluates candidates' abilities, skills, attitudes, and aptitudes in each admission from multiple perspectives.

2. Questions answerable for both the Humanities and Science backgrounds

The entrance examinations of ISI use questions accessible to both Humanities and Science backgrounds (except for international candidates).

3. Statement of Motivation for Application

ISI requires all the candidates to submit a Statement of Motivation for Application and checks eagerness, reasons, and aptitudes for ISI.

4. Reasonable Accommodation for Candidates with Disabilities

Candidates who will need accommodation or support when taking an ISI entrance examination or after entering ISI are encouraged to contact us so that we can consider giving reasonable accommodation.
